New Fund will fill a void for Salina

The house was decked out with spider webs and ghostly treats. The guests were in their most creative witch attire. But this was far from an evil gathering. Party goers only looked like bad witches, instead they were current or potential good witches- Fairy Godmothers to be exact. Hostesses Amanda Michaelis, Susan Jordan and Sarah Payne used a Halloween gathering for friends to help promote the new Women Helping Women Fund at the Greater Salina Community Foundation.

“We are so lucky to be surrounded by strong women, and we know how important it is to be generous with our support,” said party hostess Amanda Michaelis. “After I read about the Fairy Godmother fund in the paper, I knew it was the perfect organization for me to support, as well as to tell my friends about. We love to have parties and have a good time, but when we can inform people about and support local causes, it is much more fun and rewarding.”

Lawrence. Women in the community donate to create a permanent endowment in the Community Foundation. The endowment will generate annual funds to be used for grants to other women in the community.

go about their lives quietly getting by; maybe while raising children or living on a fixed income. Though Salina has many agencies that can help, there are many instances where a woman has no place to turn.

In Manhattan and Lawrence, such grants included car repair, some dental needs, short term assistance with tuition or child care, and a variety of other issues that might put a woman who lives day-to-day into a crisis. Participants in those cities are also called Fairy Godmothers, so the local effort is spreading the “magic” across the state.

Women Helping Women is a work in progress. A kick-off event was held in September with more than 80 women in attendance. At the gathering, women were encouraged to share the information with others. “We want to be inclusive of anyone who wants to be a part of this” said Anita Huntley. Even while the fund raising effort continues, committees are forming to look at the grant making process, communications, vendor relationships and special events. Grants are not yet available, but if all goes well, the committee hopes that they will be ready to make grants sometime late next year.

Members of the steering committee met with local human service agencies in Salina in August to share ideas and ensure that they were not duplicating services already offered in the community. The agency representatives whole-heartedly supported the formation of the new fund.

Contributors of at least $500 to the fund are dubbed Fairy Godmothers. Donors can pledge their gift over a two year period. However, contributions of any size are welcome, and all gifts are tax deductible through the Community Foundation. More than $30,000 has already been pledged or raised to establish the fund. The organizers would like to have an endowment of at least $100,000.

GSCF and five of our affiliate foundations are taking part in a wonderful grant from the Kansas Health Foundation (KHF). As a part of the GROW II program, donations to the participating foundations will be matched, in part, by KHF. Donations to the foundations' administrative funds, newly established public health funds and community grant funds will be matched at $.50 on the dollar. Donations to all other funds in the foundations, such as donor advised funds or funds to benefit local charities will be matched at $.25 on the dollar. Only scholarship funds are not eligible for the match. All matching funds from KHF will go to the administrative and public health funds.

Affiliate foundations currently participating include: Community Foundation for Cloud County; Heartland Community Foundation, serving Ellis, Rooks and Trego counties; Republic County Community Foundation; Russell County Area Community Foundation; Smith County Community Foundation. Several more affiliates have applied for the second round of GROW II. Those recipients will be announced in December. For more information, please call the Foundation at 785-823-1800.

UPDATE: Youth Grant Makers Council

Members of the Youth GrantMakers Council have spent the fall marketing grant opportunities to local schools, clubs, and youth groups. Council members created posters, flyers, and designed t-shirts to help inform area youth about YGMC and to encourage grant applications.

Applications for the fall grant cycle were due November 1. Another grant cycle will be available in the spring. All YGMC grants must be written by youth under the age of 18 and should benefit youth.
